Peoria Public Schools – Update from Superintendent Dr. Sharon Desmoulin-Kherat

On behalf of the Peoria Public Schools Board of Education, staff, students and families, I wish to extend my sincerest thanks to the voters of Peoria County for supporting the Peoria County School Facility Sales Tax. Your investment will be returned in the form of safer and stronger schools and the creation of local jobs. I am excited to be able to move forward with much needed projects at each of our 27 schools and complete them as outlined in our proposed plan within the next five years. It is an important step in our continued effort to raise student achievement, recruit families and staff and provide an environment that supports learning.

Speaking of student achievement and learning opportunities, we know that preparing students for their future isn't about earning A's and high GPAs. It is about preparing students for the workforce.

Educators refer to the process and work of learning as productive struggle. Learning to ride a bike is a good illustration. It takes hard work and practice. Although we can give help and support initially, eventually the rider must pump the pedals and maintain balance on their own.

Productive struggle gives students opportunities to problem-solve and collaborate by analyzing and using knowledge to create new solutions to problems or by applying that knowledge for deeper and more meaningful learning. Productive struggle is not intended to create frustration. Rather, it requires students to confront a challenging task with no immediately apparent solution by using higher levels of thinking or cognitive-demand and multiple learning strategies. (NCTM and Peterson, B., 2016). Tasks should be related to the unit of study and should be focused on sense-making. Cognitive demand goes hand-in-hand with more student autonomy, meaning that students learn independently rather than through direct, step-by-step guidance from the teacher.

Giving students opportunities for productive struggle engenders higher level thinking and a sense of accomplishment. Students retain learning more deeply and longer, and develop perseverance. This type of thinking works for any paths students may choose to take.

The work of the teacher is to provide students with thinking tools students they can then use to solve new problems or in varying scenarios.

The concepts of rigor and productive struggle are grounded in growth mindset theory and research. Having a growth mindset moves students from focusing on letter grades to developing abilities. It is about the process of learning rather than the attainment of knowledge. This moves away from thinking that students must have a natural ability in school or certain content areas. Growth mindset instead focuses on effort and the process of learning.

Growth mindset translates into students who graduate more prepared and employable for the work they plan to do as adults.

Serve Passionately,

Dr. Sharon Desmoulin-Kherat, Superintendent
